Address	119 Wallace Street
Lot/DP	Lot 1 DP598830
Date of construction	Rainbow Tavern – Pre-1872 Albion Hotel - 1872
Potential	Low Medium High
Significance	State Criteria: (a) Historical (e) Research

History

The Albion Hotel was built on the site of the Rainbow Tavern by the MacDonald family in 1872 as the “modern hotel” in Braidwood. Also includes brick barn, corrugated iron shed and stables. The Hotel was renowned for its luxuriousness during the nineteenth and early twentieth century. The building underwent renovations in the 1920s and restoration in the early 1980s.

Description of Visible Remains

The rendered brick Albion Hotel is extant and remains situated on the corner of the block on Duncan and Wallace Streets.

Potential Subsurface Remains

Building is extant on the block however there is potential for archaeological materials to remain within the rest of the lot from both the Albion Hotel and the previous Rainbow Tavern.

Significance

Built on the site of the former Rainbow Tavern, the Albion Hotel was a significant building within Braidwood in the second half of the nineteenth century. Built within the commercial district of the town on Wallace Street, the Hotel formed an important part of the streetscape and life within the town of Braidwood.

The uncovering of the archaeological remains of the Rainbow Tavern would offer research potential for location, size and material of the previous building, and would be associated with a significant historical phase in Braidwood.

Date of construction	c.1855
Potential	Low Medium High
Significance	Local Criteria: (a) Historical (e) Research

History

The Joint Stock Bank is located on the north-eastern corner of Wallace Street and Park Lane, next to Ryrie Park. Built in c.1855, the Joint Stock Bank was Braidwood's first Bank. In 1891 the Municipality of Braidwood was formed and the council held its meetings in the former bank premises until 1936 when, following merger with the Tallaganda Shire Council, meetings were transferred to the Literary Institute. The bank building has subsequently been a private residence.

Description of Visible Remains

The rendered brick Joint Stock Bank is extant and is situated at the front of the lot on Wallace Street.

Potential Subsurface Remains

Building is extant on the block however there is potential for archaeological materials to remain within the rest of the lot associated with the Joint Stock Bank.

Significance

The Joint Stock Bank was the first bank within the town of Braidwood and is significant in being a surviving building dating directly from the first decade of the gold-rush era in Braidwood's history. The bank came to Braidwood wholly because of the wealth being won from gold.

The uncovering of any archaeological remains associated with the Joint Stock Bank would offer research potential for location, size and material of the previous building/s.

History

The Doncaster Inn, Braidwood's first hotel, was built c1840 by Andrew Badgery on land he purchased on the corner of Park Lane and Wilson Streets in 1840. The hotel was leased to Patrick Goulding, who came to Braidwood in 1838 as the first Clerk of the Court. After Andrew Badgery's death in 1857 his wife, Maria, became the licensee until she retired in 1865. The Inn, built of convict made bricks, consisted of 32 rooms and a large ball room.

In 1878 the first four sisters of the Good Samaritans arrived to set up a convent and to take over the running of the school. In 1880s the Doncaster Inn Hotel was sold to the Roman Catholic Church for the Good Samaritan Nuns. It served as a boarding school and home for the sisters for 26 years. The building was demolished in 1905 and rebuilt in c.1907 from the same materials and on the site of the original Inn. During WW2 it was a boarding school. The Nuns left Braidwood in 1976 and the convent became a guest house reverting to its former name The Doncaster Inn. The building is no longer a guest house.

Description of Visible Remains

Brick buildings located on the southern border of the lot.

Potential Subsurface Remains

The original Doncaster Inn was demolished and replaced in the early twentieth century. There is therefore potential archaeological materials remaining within the lot.

History

The first Court House was built in 1837/38 by Dr Thomas Braidwood, designed by Colonial Architect Mortimer Lewis in the Greek Revival style. Prior to this the Magistrates had to hold court sessions on their own property, confine the prisoners in their own lock-up and have punishments executed on their own farms. In 1900 the old Court House was demolished and the present building constructed, further west of the original building. Since 1980 only used for Coroner's inquests, as local cases are heard at Queanbeyan. Occupants include Police Station, CPS office; Rural Land Board office to rear, entrance north side.

Description of Visible Remains

1901 brick Courthouse is situated towards the middle of the block, set back from the street. The original well from the 1937 courthouse is located underneath the courtroom floor of the 1901 building.

History

The first Catholic Church, also located on this site, was built of slabs in 1852 to accommodate a sudden influx of people to the gold diggings. The foundation stone of the present building was laid in 1858 and the church was completed in 1862. Funded largely by the diggers working on the Araluen goldfields.

The church is constructed from dimensioned and coursed local granite with ruled joints. It is a relatively simple example of the Victorian Academic Gothic Style, with buttresses and lancet windows, but otherwise minimal external decoration.

Description of Visible Remains

The 1862 building is extant on the lot.

Potential Subsurface Remains

There is potential for the remains of the first Catholic Church to be present on site. There is also potential for other archaeological materials to remain within the rest of the lot.

Significance

The grounds constitute a major open space in the centre of the town of Braidwood. The Church and Presbytery are both prominent buildings located on a prominent corner site. Altogether, the group and its setting have major townscape and social significance, having served the religious life of Braidwood for over 130 years.

Any archaeological remains uncovered within the lot would have local historical and research potential for exact location, size and material of the previous building/s.

Address	47 Elrington Street
Lot/DP	Lot 1 DP869933
Date of construction	1892
Potential	Low Medium High
Significance	Building is extant and it is likely archaeological materials remain within the lot.

History

The first Anglican Church, located in Wilson Street, was completed in 1856 and was built of brick. This was located beside the rectory which had been built in 1842 (extant). By 1880 moves for a new, larger church had begun, and a building committee met to plan for the building of a new church which would seat 400 people. Robert Maddrell of Bedervale led the fund-raising. The site in Elrington street was purchased in 1881 for £300. The new church was to cost £3500 but after the foundations were laid the project was beset by money troubles and work stopped. The Rev. J S Dobson (1888-1904) galvanised the parish once more and work recommenced. The foundation stone was laid in November that year. The new church was dedicated on 23 June 1892 by Dr Linton, the first Bishop of the Riverina. The tower, a gift from Robert Maddrell, was completed in 1900. The church was rebuilt in 1975. Existing 700 pipe organ was installed in 1904.

History

Reserved at the suggestion of Dr Thomas Braidwood Wilson as a public recreation ground and market square. The original surveyor plans of the town did not include the park reserve, however Dr Wilson petitioned to have it included to better frame the new courthouse building built across the street in 1937, prior to the official survey and proclamation of the town. Dr Wilson and other prominent settlers provided exotic plants and flowers for the grounds, and Dr Wilson also presented a fine brass sundial. His superintendent Joseph Taylor laid out the grounds and paths.

Throughout the history of the park, it was occasionally used as a grazing ground for stock. A band pavilion (rotunda) was constructed in the park in c.1896 which still remains.

Description of Visible Remains

The majority of southern section of Ryrie Park does not contain any buildings. The rotunda (constructed c.1896) is located in the middle part of the southern side of the Park

Within the northern section of Ryrie Park (also known as Braidwood Memorial Park) a public amenity building and aquatic centre has been constructed.

Potential Subsurface Remains

Ryrie Park was historically used as a community gathering centre and a grazing area for stock. The potential for uncovering archaeological remains within the site is low due to the lack of pre-1900 building construction on the site.

Significance

Significant to the town of Braidwood as a public community park in the centre of town.

BUILDING INFORMATION:

Name	The Digger's Hotel
Address	50 Wallace Street
Lot/DP	Lot 8 DP1138990
Date of construction	c.1859
Potential	Low Medium High
Significance	Local Criteria: (a) Historical (e) Research

History

Part of the group was the "Gold Digger's Home" hotel built in 1859. Home of Nomchong family in 1900 and their general store operated there for 80 years.

Store (50 Wallace Street): This is a single storey timber building with attic dormer windows on both sides of the simple, gabled, corrugated iron roof.

Residence (63 Lascelles Street): This two storey residence is of cavity wall construction using half bricks to imitate English bond, with a simple gabled, corrugated iron roof.

Other buildings: There are various later additions, apparently dating as late as the 1920s, at the rear of both buildings. The adjacent modern IGA Supermarket is on the site of various outbuildings of Nomchong's store. A former stable survives behind it. It is built of English bond brick with a gabled, corrugated iron roof and ogee guttering. This building has had openings altered and suffers from rising damp and general weathering of the timbers. There are several other buildings on the original two chain lot, including a former store or workshop on No 46 Wallace Street. The modern Owl Food Barn on Lascelles Street is a face brick, single storey building with a footpath verandah which makes it tolerably sympathetic.

The barn was part of M Nomchong and Co and Nomchong Bros businesses until 1980

Description of Visible Remains

The structure is still extant, situated on the front of the lot in Wallace Street.

Potential Subsurface Remains

Building is extant on the block however there is potential for archaeological materials to remain within the rest of the lot.

Significance

The two main buildings have significant townscape quality, particularly the former store as a prominent, mid nineteenth century timber building on a corner site.

Any archaeological remains uncovered within the lot would have local historical and research potential for exact location, size and material of the previous building/s.
